Kentucky capped a truly maddening March with an unprecedented secondhalf rally, beating Utah 78-69 Monday night to win its second NCAA championship in three years. The Wildcats did it this time with a new coach and without stars in their Kentucky overcame the largest halftime deficit — 10 points — in a championship game with its third straight rally of the tournament to win its seventh national title.

"We're comeback kids," Kentucky coach Tubby Smith said. "These kids have done it all."

With Smith working the sidelines instead of Rick Pitino and with for-

Mercer and Derek Anderson in the 62.5 points. NBA, Kentucky moved one trophy closer to UCLA's record total of 11.

It was the third straight year the Wildcats were in the championship game — they lost to Arizona in overtime last season — and the third straight year they ended Utah's season in the NCAA tournament.

Utah's impressive run to what would have been the school's second title and first since 1944 ended because Kentucky did what No. 1 seeds Arizona and North Carolina couldn't do against the Utes - shoot

Just as they had in the South Regional final against Duke and again in the national semifinals against Stanford, the Wildcats fell behind in the first half, trailing 41-31 at halftime. The deficit was as many as 12 points in the opening minutes of the second half before Kentucky started shooting well, something Utah's last two opponents couldn't do.

"We've come back all year long," Wildcats' guard Cameron Mills said. "Every time we fell behind, we never

Kentucky, which finished 29-for-57 from the field (51 percent), chipped away at the lead by scoring on seven of 10 possessions. The Wildcats took the lead for the first time since early in the first half at 60-58 with 7:16 to play on a breakaway dunk by Jeff Sheppard after he stole the ball from Hanno Mottola. Utah got the lead back at 62-60 on a driving layup by Andre Miller with 6:16 left and even extended it by two more points when Miller fed Alex Jensen for a layup 23 seconds later.

But a 3-pointer by Mills, Kentucky's fifth of the game — all in the second half — and a driving jumper by Sheppard with 4:53 left gave the Wildcats the lead for good.

Sheppard's jumper was Kentucky's last field goal until the a dunk by Wayne Turner with 12 seconds to play. The Wildcats went 11-for-12 from the foul line down the stretch and Utah's solid offensive game went to pieces as it scored on just two of its last 10 possessions.

Scott Padgett led the Wildcats with 17 points, while Sheppard had 16.

Miller led the Utes with 16 points, while Mottola and Michael Doleac each had 15 and Jensen 14.

Utah fans stunned, disappointed

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A parade and pep rally await coach Rick Majerus and the Runnin' Utes after the cheers of thousands of fans at home evaporated with Utah's hopes for an NCAA title.

Less than a year after the city's major sports attraction, the Utah Jazz, fell in six games to the Chicago Bulls in the NBA Finals, the upstart Utes suffered the same fate Monday night in losing 78-69 to Kentucky.

But their fans, as surprised as many around the country in recent days at Utah's unexpected appearance in the championship game, were only disappointed to a point.

President Merrill J. Bateman, in a phone interview, said, "Although the University of Utah lost tonight, they are still great champions. They've had a wonderful tournament, and it has thrilled everyone in Utah. They have represented the WAC extraordinarily well. Tonight our hearts bleed red, given Utah's loss. We wanted them to win. The Kentucky Wildcats have a great team, and in the end their bench strength wore Utah down. Still, every Utahn is proud that the Ute team showed such great poise winning every game and leading until the last five minutes of the championship. Brigham Young University is proud of its sister school."

"We thought Utah did a super job. That's a great team and a super coach," said Donna Tanner, a Utah alumna who watched the game on a giant screen at the University of Utah's Huntsman Center.

"We're still No. 2, and that's OK," said Sue James.

Gov. Mike Leavitt had proclaimed Monday Runnin' Ute Day before departing for San Antonio to see the game. Afterward, he said, "How many ways can you say 'I'm disappointed?'

"I think America was pulling for us," he said. "We have to remember how far we've come and how proud we are. What a remarkable year it has

Majerus and his players are scheduled to return late this afternoon to a pep rally at the Huntsman Center. On Wednesday, a parade was scheduled to wind up at City Hall, where Mayor Deedee Corradini and the city council were to present them the key to the

"We are definitely a sports capital and the world knows it," Corradini said in San Antonio. "This was a great run and there's more to come."

On Monday night, some 4,000 redclad die-hards showed up at the Huntsman Center. Afterward, as they spilled into the cool night air, many seemed stunned and shocked by what they had witnessed.

"I felt like I had an autopsy performed on me in those last four minutes," said Kent Scott of Salt Lake. "It hurts, but that's the price of caring."

"We missed so many jumpers and open shots that we normally make," said Ross Fornelius. "I was just hoping we weren't going to leave the

8 days until peace, leaders hope

Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland - Peace negotiators in Northern Ireland launched an offensive Monday to sort out within nine working days the conflict that has defied solution for 30 years.

Former U.S. Sen. George Mitchell, chairman of the talks that began in 1996, has set an April 9 deadline for the British and Irish governments and eight participating parties to agree on a new system of government for Northern Ireland.

Negotiators are expected to work from morning to night until Friday and resume April 6, taking breaks only to eat and sleep.

"We simply do not have the luxury of more time," Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern said of the deadline. "Time is very much the enemy in a situation where the opponents of peace are actively seeking to make agreement impossible through the stepping up of violence."

The negotiations in Belfast are supposed to be reinforced by cease-fires by Northern Ireland's major paramilitary groups. The Irish Republican Army, supported by militant Roman Catholics, declared a cease-fire in July The Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, rooted in pro-British Protestant areas, called a truce in October 1994. Members of both camps have violated their truces sporadically.

And dissidents openly opposed to the talks are challenging the established groups' authority with sectarian killings.

The latest victim, a retired Protestant policeman shot outside a supermarket, was buried Sunday. A small anti-British group called the Irish National Liberation Army, which criticizes the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party's participation in talks, claimed responsibility.

Party, participate in the All Party Talks in Belfast on Monday. Negotiators hope to develop a political agreement for the province by the April 9 deadline. Since the late 1960s, violence between different political parties and religious affiliations has ripped through the area.

The conflict over how Northern Ireland should be governed began in 1968 with street clashes between Catholic protesters and Protestant police. The IRA started bombing and shooting in 1970, fueling the growth of Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force gangs that killed Catholics at random.

The outline of a likely political settlement has been on the table since the British and Irish governments published joint recommendations in January, but the question is who will agree to it.

The governments want Protestants and Catholics to govern Northern Ireland in coalition and simultaneously send representatives to a new cross-border council with lawmakers from the Irish Republic.

Participants consider such an agreement involvement of the the possible with two largest parties: the Ulster Unionists on the Protestant side and the Social Democratic and Labor Party on the Catholic side.

A longer shot would be an agreement that includes both the Ulster Unionists and Sinn Fein, which wants to abolish Northern Ireland as a state separate from the rest of Ireland.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair secretly met Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble on Sunday. As Trimble arrived for talks in Belfast, he said both governments were exaggerating the prospects for peace, stressing there was only "a possibility" that his party's disagreements with Catholic leaders could be resolved.

LONDON - Rolls-Royce, that very British symbol of elegant motoring, is going foreign, bought Monday by German automaker BMW in a $570 million

The deal still must be approved by shareholders of parent company Vickers PLC, which selected BMW's bid over offers from rival Volkswagen and two consortiums, including one of Rolls enthusiasts who had fought to keep the company British.

However, regrets about a German takeover of a brand name that ranks alongside Coca-Cola and McDonald's in terms of world fame were tempered by the prospect of new investment and German pledges to keep things British. From its headquarters in Munich, BMW said it will inject $1.68 billion into

"We have methods to make sure Rolls-Royce also maintains its high quality,"

"The Britishness is, in our view, one of the main assets of Rolls-Royce, and we will keep it," Mahla said.

Along the Chateauguay River, in the Monteregie region south of Montreal, flooding forced at least 170 people out of their homes less than three months after an ice storm wiped out power to the region. About 300 people in the Beauce area south of Quebec City also had to be evacuated from their homes.

Raging wash kills Scouts, leader

SUNFLOWER, Ariz. — A raging, rain-swollen wash swept away a vehicle just as rescuers were trying to save members of a Boy Scout troop who were clinging to the roof for more than two hours. Two Scouts and a troop leader drowned.

The tragedy happened late Saturday after the group of four adults and nine boys in Troop 286 aborted their camping trip as El Nino-driven rains battered the low mountains of central Arizona.

A van carrying seven members of the group made it across, but the Explorer got stuck. The two adults and the four Scouts managed to crawl out and cling to the roof for more than two hours before help arrived.

The rushing water covered the roof of the Explorer just as rescuers grabbed Leah Stubblefield, 33, the driver of the Ford Explorer; her son, 13-year-old Justin Schraeder; and Weiss, who is about 15. As rescuers tried to save the remaining three, the floodwaters pushed the truck downstream. It rolled a couple of times, throwing them into the water.

Sunday, rescuers found the victims' bodies about a half-mile to a mile downstream. They were identified as Jarron Dirvonas, 12, of Gilbert; Scott Zimmerman, 11, of Gilbert; and troop leader Dean Alexander, 38, of Chandler.

Palestine, Israel unwilling to confo

JERUSALEM — U.S. envoy Dennis Ross made one last attempt Monday to get Israel to agree to a troop withdrawal from 13 percent of the West Bank — but Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu indicated Ross would leave empty-handed.

The American mediator's fourth and final meeting with Netanyahu ended Monday night with no decisions, Israel Television said.

Ross suggested that American patience was running out, and the Clinton administration would not keep up the mediation effort indefi-

"At some point we have to bring this effort to a conclusion," he said.

In the West Bank, Palestinians chanting "Death to America!" stoned Israeli troops as frustration grew over Washington's inability to break the deadlock in the peace talks.

Israeli troops fired tear gas and metal pellets to disperse hundreds of protesters in the West Bank towns of Bethlehem, El Bireh and Ramallah. Several Palestinians were injured.

Palestinian police, meanwhile, rounded up several supporters of the Islamic militant group Hamas to question them about the explosion of a car reportedly rigged with 110 pounds of TNT.

The car bomb, apparently intended for use in an attack in Israel, went off prematurely Sunday in an industrial zone of the West Bank town of Ramallah, killing one Palestinian. The blast reduced the car to a ball of twisted metal and leveled the garage it was hidden in. A gun and a hand grenade

Not willing to listen

Provo residents will have to wait until next week to make their final, futile attempt to get their City Council to listen to them. Why isn't the Council listening? Because it is intent on selling out to big developers. The developer du jour (and there have been many in Provo's history) wants to turn Seven Peaks into a bunch of apartments. Why has this got some residents concerned? The residents fear that the high-density housing will lead to increased traffic, pollution and safety hazards.

The issue raises some difficult questions, balancing the rights of the developers with those of residents guarding against changes that may negatively affect their livelihoods. Brent and Scott McQuarrie own the area. On the surface, it would appear that the owners have the right to develop the area as they please. After all, this is a capitalist society — a land of opportunity.

However, this argument can only go so far before it stumbles over the issue of zoning. The 51 acres planned for development are zoned for public-facility use, not residential. In order to allow the proposed housing project, the area must be rezoned for residential use.

The issue of zoning must be decided by the Provo City Council, which is supposed to represent the people of the community. However, the ongoing debate suggests that the residents' voices are not being heard.

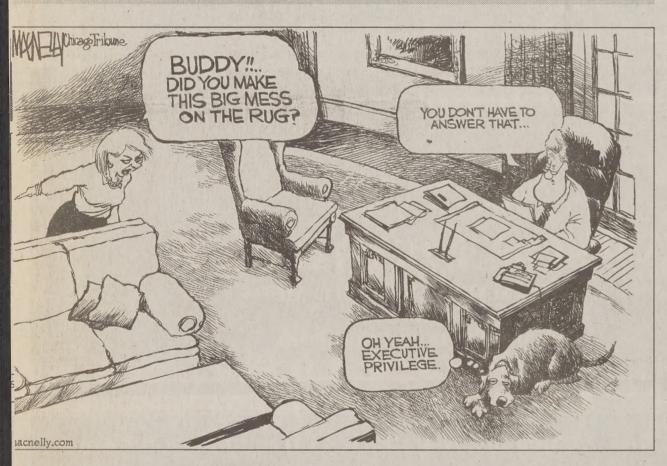

The residents, who have formed a group called Concerned Families of Provo, have legitimate arguments. A high-density residential area would lead to increased traffic flow and, consequently, safety hazards that the residents are unaccustomed to. A traffic study paid for by Seven Peaks officials said the complexes would bring an additional 19, 000 vehicle trips to the area each day. Finally, the residents feel that housing which caters to a transient population would disrupt the sense of community.

At issue is not so much the development of housing, but the residents' right to maintain their standard of living. The reason that the City Council should reject the proposal is simple. The residents don't want high-density housing and the problems that come with it. It does not seem justifiable for the Council to rezone an area already set aside for public-facility use when so many of the area's residents oppose the measure.

Bert Cherry, chair for a group called the Maeser Neighborhood Committee, was quoted in the Provo Daily Herald suggesting that the City Council members had a responsibility to the community to not allow high density housing. "The real issue is no more high density," he told the Council. "You each ran on that platform. How can you even hear this thing?"

It's no secret that Provo, along with the entire state, is growing faster than it can accommodate itself. However, in dealing with such rapid growth, the rights of residents to maintain their standard of living must be guarded. Hopefully, the city has not become so big that it can't hear the voices of its community. Perhaps the most disturbing thing is that the citizens of Provo are stuck with a Council that follows, not leads; fixes, not projects.

Why general education?

Douglas F.

General

Education and Honors

This is the first of two discussions on the ntent and purpose of general education at VU.

People interested in attending BYU or have their children enroll can, on opening the st pages of the BYU catalog, soon learn nat a BYU education is all about. The mismand aims of the university are spelled out early and in detail We learn, for example, at this kind of education is to have a firm d deep spiritual core; it is to be piritually strengthening" and haracter building." In addition, idents are to have a "major," or to to one. The major emphasizes ompetence" and "in-depth study." uch in-depth study" we read, elps prepare students for their b's work; it also teaches them that nuine understanding of any subset requires exploring it fully, and understanding acquire such pth from their major and minor lds."

o far, so good. It seems reasonably clear it virtually everyone connected with or erested in a BYU education understands se two points. We all need a good religious acation-that is what BYU is about — and all need a major that will, it is thought, pare us for our "life's work" tut what of general education? How does it? Is it really fundamental to eternity or fe's work." or just a series of intellectual academic hoops to jump through to fill duation requirements, something to "get with" and "out of the way" as quickly as ssible? Should we take seriously what it is there on the same pages that this same (U education should be "intellectually arging," developing such abilities as und thinking, effective communication, intitative reasoning, historical perspective I global awareness?"

hat role does GE play in all of these or in acquisition of wisdom and character, the fundamental characteristics of a "true" education," according to President David O. McKay? Does it also have a role to play in the vision of a true education" which "seeks to make men and women not only good mathematicians, proficient linguists, profound scientists, or brilliant literary lights, but also honest men with virtue, temperance and brotherly love." We think the answer is yes.

and aims of the university are spelled out arly and in detail We learn, for example, at this kind of education is to have a firm even, especially in this day, education for making a living. In an information and global ago an education that focuses on developing a welltrained critical mind and a global perspective may be the most practical education in this world.

There is, in fact, some evidence that in the frequently expressed lack of understanding of the centrality of general education as one of the three legs of the education stool, BYU's parents and students may be more similar to their national counterparts than different. A 1997 survey funded by the AT&T Foundation and published in "Liberal Education" (Summer 1997) found that "American higher education has remade itself into a vast job-training program in which the liberal arts are no longer central," and that "parents and college-bound high school students have very little familiarity with the meaning or purpose of the liberal arts."

Furthermore, the survey discovered that "relatively few high school students and parents recognize that liberal arts programs are the best source of such (general education) skills." "In fact, when asked to volunteer what a liberal arts education means to them, four in 10 high school students, along with one in five parents, were unable to give any answer at all." This was, however, not true for business executives. Forty nine percent were "very positive" toward a liberal arts education that produces "people of strong character with generalized intellectual and social skills and a capacity for lifelong learning."

Food, not computers

Robert L. Rookhuyzen Riverside, Calif.

Why is Clinton so adamant about Africans being hooked up to the Internet (to the extent that he will pledge millions of our tax dollars) when so many of them lack food and basic elements of life? I fail to see how a poor, hungry African who lives in sub-standard housing and unsanitary conditions would be benefited by a connection to the Internet.

Proud to stop

Heidi Thaden Provo

I must agree with the author of Thursday's "Freedom not free," who wrote about the playing of our national anthem and the respect it deserves. In the March 23 Snide Remarks there was a "snide remark" proposing we stop our cars, get out and stand at attention during the national anthem. It was, I believe, suppose to be taken as a joke.

Obviously the author of Snide Remarks has never visited a military base or he would have known that when the anthem is played at 5 p.m., traffic stops. Everyone gets out of their cars and stands at attention. It MEANS something to those of us who have sacrificed to help give you the freedom you now take for granted. I have not served in the military, but I am an Army brat, and I have seen the sacrifices firsthand. I have given up my father numerous times to watch him go off and defend your rights. He is now preparing to serve in Sarajevo for a second six-month tour. Every day I have to worry and pray for him.

You complain of the inconvenience of stopping for a few moments, but I can tell you it is not convenient to have your father on the other side of the world. I am proud to stop and stand at attention when the anthem is played. Take those few moments to think, and maybe you will learn to be grateful for the sacrifices all the servicemen and women around this world are making every day in order for you to safely sit here and not have to worry about the world outside of this campus. Don't take your freedom for granted, because one day you just might lose it.

Learn English

Bogdan Banu
Bucharest, Romania
Rod Foreman
Los Angeles

When international students attend BYU, it is clear that they lack the English skills that the American students already have. This puts them at a disadvantage and raises the question: should there be separate standards for foreign students in English classes?

International students are more likely to perform poorly and take a less active role in the classroom because they have "listening difficulties, lack of understanding of differences in cultural background, poor oral and communication skills, insufficient vocabulary and poor writing skills" (Lee, 96). International students have not had the opportunity of going through a predominantly English speaking school, and are thus at a disadvantage when compared to native speakers.

On the other hand, although it is true that foreign students do not know English as well as the native students, it was their choice to attend college here. Foreign students need to stop arguing the negative side of not being able to speak English well, and look at the positive side of being a foreign student. International students are able to speak English, as well as their native language. This gives them a better chance of getting a job. If a teacher lowers his or her standards for an international student, the students will not prepare as they should.

After looking at both sides of the argument, we conclude that foreign students do face some challenges when coming to school in the United States. We believe that there should be a preparation class that would get international students ready for English 115. This solution would allow international students to get further preparation for the English 115 class and bring them to a level close to that of the students in other classes. There would be no need for double standards in the regular English 115 class.

Finally, it would be easier for the teachers as well, since they wouldn't have to make different assignments and grading scales for the international students.

Stop temple talk

Madelyn Black Spokane, Wash.

Like most unendowed Latter-day Saints, I am excited for the day when I can enter the temple and take out my own endowments. As a child, my mother diverted my questions about the temple ceremony by telling me that it was inappropriate to talk about outside of the temple because it was sacred. I assume that this is something she committed to inside the temple, and one reason that the world at large cannot participate in our very sacred temple ceremonies.

If the temple ceremonies are not something appropriate to discuss, then why do I frequently hear, in class no less, the comment "For those of you who have been through the temple, this will have special meaning." This sort of comment is annoying because it excludes half the class from any discussion.

Infinitely more bothersome are the comments that actually refer to specific details of the temple ceremony. This angers me for two reasons. First of all, those who reveal inappropriate information about the temple ceremony are ruining the experience for those of us who are anxiously waiting our first experience. When only partial truths are revealed, the mind is left to wander and distort the sacred, saving truths of the temple. Even worse, these people are desecrating the most personal, spiritual and sacred aspects of our religion. Who is to say that this information will not get into the wrong hands when it is flipantly tossed about in school or church? From what I hear, anything you want to know about the temple ceremony can be learned from the scriptures, so if you must refer to sacred temple covenants, couldn't you just make scriptural reference? Please stop this temple talk and have respect for the Lord and for those of us still waiting to go to the temple.

Federalism the issue

Joe Whitfield
Tallahassee, Fla.

This is in response to the letter in Thursday's Readers' Forum titled "One-sided lectures."

The Civil War was a tragic period in the history of our country. Unfortunately, too many people do not understand the issues that were so viciously fought over. I hope to clarify some of them.

First of all, slavery was certainly an issue, but not the main issue. Reviewing history, one can see that up to that point in our country's history, each state had enjoyed a considerable amount of autonomy. In fact, the federal government was seen merely as an entity set up to unite individuals and autonomous states under an umbrella organization.

At the time, slavery was a major economic factor contributing to the welfare of the Southern states. Not only was it considered an economic necessity, but it was a way of life. Recognizing the importance of the states' rights to govern themselves, the people felt it was up to the separate states to decide whether or not to allow slavery. Each state held votes on the matter, and many of the Novi and to enacted legislation to abolish the delode while many of the Southern states many keep it.

The problem arose when the feder of the ment passed a law abolishing slighted. Southern states saw this as an attendance federal government to take away town of the individual states. They control this was right, and to show their individual states. They control they seeded from the Union. In each moin said, "If you're going to change the sense that, I'm taking my ball and got both that, I'm taking my ball and got both themselves from the Union, as it is for them, not they for it.

To say the war between the states solely on the slavery issue is naive.

"He (Galper) is one of the main jazz players of our time on the piano," said Ray Smith, BYU's director of Jazz Studies.

Tonight's concert should present some of the more traditional work in Galper's repertoire. The pianist has experimented in avant-garde jazz styles but recently returned to the more popular and mainstream styles.

Galper has more than 68 recordings and 75 original compositions to his credit. Seventeen of those recordings feature Galper as ensemble

The musician is noted for his work with Chet Baker, Cannonball Adderly, John Scofield and the Phil Woods Quintet, as well as for anchoring the Slide Hampton Quartet, the Lee Konitz Duo and the Stan Getz Quartet.

"He has played with literally everybody," Smith said.

Galper, a respected educator, is a 1959 graduate of Berklee College of Music and faculty member for the Deserving of Wider Recognition" New School of Jazz and Contemporary Music. He has presented theoretical articles in Downbeat Magazine.

"He's a very good player; I like the way he plays, and I like the way he writes," Baker is quoted on Galper's Web site. "I asked him to sit in with me at the Jazz Workshop in Boston and hired him ... just like that."

This launched Galper into his musical career and brought tremen-

And yet, the pianist is still approachable, according to Smith.

"He's very outgoing and outspoken," Smith said. "He is fun to be around and has a good sense of humor."

Galper has gone through several musical phases, from straight be-bop to a sophisticated modern style to a more disciplined technique.

After experimenting with electronic instruments, Galper realized he had "been avoiding the acoustic piano." He vowed to go back to his acoustic piano roots and, to strengthen that commitment, he pushed his Fendor Rhodes keyboard into the Hudson river, watching the bubbles rise as it sank.

Tonight's performance will give audiences a chance to also hear drummer Steve Ellington, who began playing with Ray Charles at age nine.

Bass player Jeff Johnson is also an accomplished musician. Johnson was elected in 1987 as one of Down Beat Magazine's "Young Musicians and named "Musician of the Year" in 1992 by Earshot Magazine.

Tickets for tonight's show are available at the Fine Arts Ticket Office and are $8 for students and seniors, $9 for the general public.

Galper will also host a free clinic Galper discovered jazz while dealing with jazz playing and the music business today at 10 a.m. in

Yet sprinter Windy Jorgensen said that when asked about it Poole bowed his head, got humble and said he wed it all to his assistant coaches and the team.

Really the award is because of his coaching, he is great," Jorgensen said. The entire team echoes that sentiment. Part of the reason the team members feel they have succeeded is Poole's coaching ability. "He's awesome, and he knows exactly what he's talking about," printer Angie Poulsen said. "I just take his word for it and do what he wants because I know he knows." "Probably in my coaching experience, I don't know that I've seen a coach that has more knowledge overall of track and field than (Poole)," said assistant coach Richard Legas. Not only does Poole have a great overall knowledge of the sport, but he knows the specifics of each event and sees the little things that no one else notices. On Sundays after a meet, he watches the races and analyzes them, lorgensen said. He loves what he Jorgensen ended up at BYU for many reasons, but one of them was Poole. He stuck with her and believed she still had potential even though she did not improve during her senior year in high school, Jorgensen said.

"(Poole) has great ability to see talent, and he's gone out and worked hard to recruit that talent and get them here to BYU," Legas said.

"Poole is always there believing in you," Jorgensen said, "but he makes you work hard. He knows what you are capable of, and he makes you work to achieve it. He lets you know what he expects."

"In spite of all the hard work, Poole also makes track fun and he's a great friend," said jumper Marian Clayton. "He helps you, and it's fun just to talk

At practice Poole can be found watching several events at once. He measures steps for the hurdlers, while timing the sprinters and watching the high jumpers technique. Even when he's busy, Poole takes time for any of his athletes that come to him with questions or problems, and he always has the answers.

All of these traits add up to a very successful coaching career. Poole began coaching track at BYU 17 years ago. During those years, BYU has won every WAC outdoor title and six of the seven WAC indoor titles. Before BYU joined the WAC in 1990, they won every AIAW Region VII and

Rios ascends to tennis' top spot without taking major

Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. - In Melbourne, Paris, London and New York, news of Marcelo Rios getting the No. 1 ranking was probably the same: Marcelo Rios?!

The 5-foot-9 Chilean is a magician with a tennis racket. He must be, because he's pulled off the nifty feat of becoming No. 1 without winning a Grand Slam.

Thanks to his victory over Andre Agassi in the final of the Lipton Championships, Rios ended Pete Sampras' streak of 102 consecutive weeks at No. 1 when the new rankings came out Monday.

Rios can credit consistency for becoming the first South American to top the rankings. The 22-year-old left-hander was runner-up at the Australian Open in January, and he was the only player to reach the fourth round at all four majors last

He didn't win any of them, and yet he's No. 1. That's like winning the Super Bowl without scoring a touchdown.

Lindsay Davenport, ranked second on the women's tour, had this description for Rios' achievement: "Kind of weird."

The comment made Rios bristle. "Maybe girls are a different thing," he said. "Winning a Grand Slam for girls is really easy, so they should be No. 1 really easy. I think with guys it's really tough. It's not playing like Agassi, a former No. 1, said Rios deserves the ranking — for now.

"How everybody does in the Grand Slams is going to determine ultimately the end-of-the-year ranking," Agassi said. "He'll have to win a slam this year to be No. 1 in the players' eyes."

Tim Henman, who lost to Rios in the Lipton semifinals, had no complaints about the new No. 1

"Ranking points don't lie," Henman said. "You've got to earn every single one of them. Rios hasn't won a Grand Slam, but he's come very close. I think it won't be long before he does win a major."

The only other player to reach No. 1 without owning a Grand Slam title was Ivan Lendl in 1983, and he went on to win eight majors.

Sampras, who has 10 Grand Slam titles, will try to make Rios' reign brief. He can regain No. 1 by reaching the semifinals at Hong Kong next week.

Contract promises safer train crossings

By MARCUS BURTON

marcus@du2.byu.edu Universe Staff Writer

The Utah County Commission has entered into a joint contract with the Utah Department of Transportation to either close or upgrade 32 railroad crossings throughout the county.

UDOT and Utah County will close 10 crossings and upgrade 22 others in an attempt to make the highways

There are several railroad crossings in Utah County that are not needed and add a danger for motorists.

The majority of the closures will be in the southern portion of Utah County where there are many alternative routes to get across the railroad tracks, said Gary Herbert, Utah County commissioner.

"If the crossings are not needed, then we would be better off closing sary, Herbert said.

them," he said.

There is no need for railroad crossings that are only one block away from each other, said Bret N. Barney, state coordinator for Operation Lifesaver, an educational program that teaches drivers about train awareness.

He said there are close to 200 railroad crossings in Utah County, and between 35 and 45 trains cross them

According to the contract, which was agreed upon March 24, the County will pay 6.77 percent of the $5.7 million project.

The majority of the money will go to pay for the engineering and construction for the improvements.

The remaining money will come from the federal government's Highway Safety Act. The act allows states to improve roads nationwide in whatever ways the states feel neces-

The majority of the improvements will include better signs, better roads up to the tracks and better lights. Herbert said.

The project will take approximately 18 months to complete. However, the starting date has not been established. he said

"We plan to start some time this summer, but it all depends on how long the bidding for the project takes, Herbert said.

The project is really a cooperation between UDOT, Utah County and Union Pacific.

Union Pacific has the overall say about what happens to the crossings but because the improvements focus on road safety, the county and UDOT have been given the responsibility.

The railroad will still maintain the flashing lights, gates and area between the tracks, and the county will maintain other crossing areas.

Associated Press

JONESBORO, Ark. — A steady stream of cars, pickups and vans brought children back to Westside Middle School Monday for the first day of classes since a deadly ambush that left residents a long, painful return toward a normal

Classes began on schedule Monday, and "we're doing fine," said Susan Welch, a school secretary whose voice was recorded on a 911 call last Tuesday reporting shots fired and requesting an ambulance.

School reopened Thursday, but the day was devoted to counseling. Friday was an already-scheduled day off.

Mitchell Johnson, 13, and Drew Golden, 11, are being held on murder and battery charges while they await their next court appearance April 29.

Mitchell's father, Scott Johnson, told NBC's "Today" show that a visit to his son in jail over the weekend was "very painful." "These are young boys — young children — and to see them behind bars ..., " he said. He described his son as very upset and remorseful. Sunday, The Jonesboro Sun published an interview with

Candace Porter, the 11-year-old girl whose breakup with Mitchell was given as a possible reason for the rampage that left four pupils and a teacher dead.

Candace, a sixth-grade honor roll student, said Mitchell had threatened her and often talked about beating up other boys, so she thought little of it when she heard he was saying "something big might happen."

Candace said she knew little about Mitchell when she agreed to be his girlfriend about a month ago and that she did not feel responsible for his actions.

"I thought he was nice, and then I found out he was trouble," she told the newspaper. "He was always talking about fighting other people. He'd say he was going to beat them up the next day. He called one of our music teachers a bad name that I can't say."

Doctors removed a bullet from Candace's right side; it had penetrated li

Orem girl receives 3rd continuance

By MARK MORRIS morris@du2.byu.edu Universe Staff Writer

Monday's waiver hearing for Lipina Lolohea, the 17-year-old Orem girl accused of killing Samuela Loseli, ended in its third continuance and left Loseli's family waiting for answers.

Jared Leung, Lolohea's attorney, asked Judge Lynn Davis to grant the continuance "one more time" for three weeks.

Leung said more time is needed for additional discovery in the case.

Philip Hadfield of the Utah County Attorney's office said he would not object to the continuance.

Lolohea's next hearing was set for April 20 at 10 a.m. in the Fourth District Court.

Kisina Neiufi, Loseli's first cousin. said the continuance bothers the family because they are still waiting to find out what happened.

"We are still confused," said Misi Tuai, also Loseli's first cousin.

Mark Brady, of the Utah County Attorney's office, said that Lolohea's 15-year-old brother might be certified as an adult, and the brother had his first certification hearing March 12 at 9 a.m. in the Orem Juvenile Court.

The hearing will resume April 7 at

For the 15-year-old to be certified as an adult, the state has to establish probable cause, the act must be a felony, and the state must show by a preponderance of evidence that it is in the best interest of the state and the juvenile that he is certified, Brady

The judge determines if the juvenile will be certified as an adult by looking at the following criteria: the seriousness of the offense, the protection of the community, maturity of the juvenile and whether the felony was against person or property.

Utah areas consider fluoridating water

By CHANTELLE TURNER chantelle@du2.byu.edu Universe Staff Writer

Fluoride, an issue debated in the 1970s, has again caught the attention of some communities. Salt Lake County, Tooele, Orem and Park City are among communities that may look at water fluoridation.

The City-County Health Department told The Associated Press that 62 percent of national water supplies are fluoridated, but only three percent of Utah water is treated. Sixty-five percent of Utah children suffer from dennationally.

benefits, some citizens still oppose fluoridation.

"A lot of people don't want fluoride in their system. They want to have the opportunity to choose, and they don't want the city to mandate that they are going to put fluoride in the system. It is a pretty hot issue," said Bruce Chestnut, water resource division manager of Orem.

The American Dental Association has supported water fluoridation as an effective way to reduce tooth decay.

Water fluoridation reaches citizens in their homes, at school and at work — simply by drinking the water. It is an example of a public-health program. Nearly 145 million Americans are receiving the benefits of fluoridated water, according to the American Dental Association Web site.

"I think I speak for the dentists ocally and nationally that every one of our mission statements is to help beople achieve and maintain optimum oral health. Fluoride is part of that t's protection," said Roger L. Farley, local dentist.

Cory Warburton, a local hygienist, aid fluoride is most effective when aken in small, frequent amounts.

Fluoride is already a natural element in water, although at a very low mount. Toothpaste contains fluoride, and pills are available to supplement a person's intake of fluoride. Only hrough all of the sources working pgether are the benefits reaped.

"Fluoride strengthens the teeth. It is itally important for children. It has een shown across the country that it uts back on decay anywhere from 40 o 65 percent on children's teeth nainly," Warburton said.

"It's always a good idea to promote ental health, which obviously is the nain issue with fluoride, especially in hildren. But the issue of whether or ot the city culinary-water system is ne best item to use to be able to ecommodate that is the thing in question," said Bart Simons, water sources manager for Provo City department of water resources.

City water officials want citizens to understand the attached price tag will Chestnut said both Provo and Orem take water from the same source. To add fluoride, both communities would have to agree.

"It would be several thousand dollars for each site for the original installation and then the continued maintenance after that point," Simons

The water system does not contain a tal disease compared to 35 percent common entry point, rather wells and springs are located throughout the Despite the statistics and the health *cities. The expense comes from injecting the fluoride and maintaining the appropriate level of fluoride.

Chestnut said the level of fluoride is naturally occurring at 0.2 to 0.6 part per million. A ppm is equivalent to a milligram per liter. The injection of fluoride would raise the level to 1 part per million.

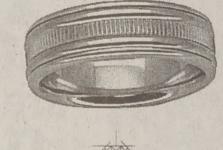

"Fluoride in high amounts is poisonous and does cause problems," Warburton said. "But 1 part per million does nothing but good for your Chestnut said the cost has not been thoroughly researched in this area. However, a Salt Lake City study has estimated its citizens would pay $4 annually per customer, according to the AP.

"The issue of fluoridation will be settled by the citizens, and what their decision is will dictate what we do as a water utility," Simons said.
